

Academic positions are often not vacated with resignations. Tenured faculty who know the ropes take a leave of absence of one year. Then they can return to their position if the explored opportunity is not to their liking.

Think about what happened and that additional fact. The proof that David Funder wrote is specious for many reasons 1) legal 2) computer security and 3) practical.