

SIGNIFICANCE

This paper (www.brettfleisch.com/WMWD-F.pdf) has significance to the scientific community, government community, and to those interested in understanding how computer science relates to many important issues and in particular to your water bill. It discusses the bonded municipal advisors approach that the water company adopted in this water district. It is a major concern of your community because the approach has been advocated in numerous communities throughout the United States. A list of municipalities that may have adopted the approach are at consultant's communities (right click and open in a new tab). My report about the concerns in their scientific approach should have widespread interest.
